5. Harbor Craft Vessel used one tug in subject port, which tug, [redacted] was the only one [redacted] Tug was used to push vessel to point designated E and there turn her about preparatory to leaving port.
6. Berth [redacted] a marginal concrete wharf which is diagrammed [redacted] only one hard surface road between berth and the town proper. Vessel carried inbound 1300 tons of oranges, which were discharged by four gangs of stevedores, working three shifts of eight hours each. Each gang was composed of about eight men. Checkers are said to be female. [redacted] proficiency of handling was "good." While in subject port, vessel took on, via a 3" hose, 60 tons of drinking water and boiler water [redacted] Pressure and supply maintained in subject port are said to be good. [redacted] three new unassembled cranes which had recently been discharged. Origin of these cranes is unknown.
7. Shipbuilding and Repairs [redacted] there is a shipyard located at designator G, but he was unable to give any pertinent details.
8. Naval Vessels [redacted] only an occasional patrol vessel was observed in subject harbor.
9. Merchant Vessels [redacted] freighter discharged cotton at designator H, and a Soviet freighter discharged coal at designator I. No other particular merchant vessels were noted in subject harbor.
10. Shore Activities Crew was allowed ashore under the half-pass system and practically all participated. The pass was good until midnight, when crew had to be back aboard. General impression of the crew was that food and drink in subject town were fair but there was not much choice. Prices, however, were said to be reasonable.
11. Miscellaneous
  - a. [redacted] Latvians avoided discussion of Soviet rule. [redacted] when asked questions regarding Soviets, they first spit on the deck and then proceed to make their answer. [redacted] UNCODED ship was the first [redacted] ship in Riga since World War II.
  - b. A female radio operator named Valentina, [redacted] and a Soviet radio announcer took members of the crew on a conducted tour of the city and subsequently interviewed them on the radio. Valentina [redacted] served as interpreter. Radio interview was a question and answer type in which Valentina asked only questions to which [redacted] the answers would be favorable to the USSR. Chief Engineer of vessel met an [redacted] man who had married a Latvian woman during World War II and was living in Riga with her. [redacted]
  - c. An airfield is said to be located at designator J. [redacted] a number of aircraft, believed to be of both military and commercial types, arriving and departing this area. [redacted] 15 to 20 each day, either landing or taking off at this field. [redacted] no new construction in subject town except monuments. [redacted] many buildings seemed to be in
